

Thanks to the efforts of many individuals and industry supporters, the first phase of the California FFA Center is now operational! The beautifully designed and landscaped property along Highway 99 is a highly visible symbol of the importance of California agriculture, and of the rich tradition that the Future Farmers of America program has played in providing premier leadership development for California's agricultural industry.

The first phase is now built, but we need your help – now more than ever. Before we can begin to build the second phase of the FFA Center facility, we must pay off the remainder of the USDA Rural Development loan that enabled this first phase to be completed. In order to meet our financial obligations, we are reaching out to the many people whose lives have been touched by the FFA to ask for their help to ensure that future generations of young people will enjoy the benefits of FFA membership. Please join us by making a contribution today!

I believe in the future of agriculture and the California Future Farmers of America Organization.
